   - Special Recognition
   - Update on Vision Zero
   - Update on Human Resource efforts
   - Ongoing Activities
Director Borden arrived.

Julie Kirschbaum, Director, Transit, recognized the overhead line crew.

Kimberly Ackerman, Director of Human Resources, discussed hiring and retention.

Jeffrey Tumlin, Director of Transportation, discussed recent fatalities and rapid response and safety efforts; Sunday Streets events and Transit Driver Appreciation Day.

Director Eaken requested a deeper dive on Vision Zero efforts with respect to what staff is learning from incidents and how the SFMTA’s approach is evolving.

Chair Heinicke asked for a report back on the closure of Market Street to cars.

PUBLIC COMMENT:

Herbert Weiner commended staff for addressing the wiring issues. The problems with service delivery are largely internal. The Muni Forward program doesn’t address any of them. These items must be addressed but that hasn’t been done.

No report.

9. Public Comment

Joel Kamisher discussed school crossing guards. They help save money by preventing accidents. The City paid almost $5 million in claims that could have been spent on better causes. Crossing guards can’t prevent all accidents but everyday thousands of cars interact with thousands of distracted pedestrians. The odds of achieving our Vision Zero goal is high.

Robert Cesana asked for the transfer of Kate Toran out of the taxi director position. Nobody wants to come to a meeting because they don’t believe what is being said. The information being given out isn’t correct. The Supervisors and the City want a working taxi industry. Since the SFMTA took over taxis, the industry has gone downhill. It used to be known as one of the best systems in the nation.

Trinice Oliver discussed Bauer Transportation. They aren’t paying her medical bills nor her insurance. The commuter shuttle buses take cars off the street. They did pay her a bonus. The drivers aren’t getting paid what they deserve. The company is not following the “labor harmony” provision.

John Hamill discussed Bauer Transportation. There isn’t a labor contract currently. They’ve been working to get one but it hasn’t happened. There was a work stoppage three weeks ago but they want to keep negotiating. Drivers aren’t getting any response from Bauer. He asked the SFMTA to look at the “labor harmony” provisions and contact Bauer about the contract provisions.
Raina Jones stated that Bauer drivers haven’t had a contract for six months and their insurance hasn’t been paid. The company didn’t tell them they weren’t going to pay for those expenses. They’re doing the same job as everyone else but they are paid less. The head of Bauer is refusing to negotiate.

Joe Mattekel discussed Bauer Transportation. They don’t have labor harmony. They have left their drivers without health care and are behind in their retirement payments. He asked the SFMTA to pull their permit.

Cat Carter requested an update on the digital signage contract. There hasn’t been a great history of good user experience. Signage shouldn’t be considered an afterthought. They have advocated for two sided signs for users to make signs more accessible.

Herbert Weiner suggested that Bauer Transportation is inequitable. He addressed the elimination of the stop at 29th and Church Streets to the detriment of seniors and the disabled. He is concerned about the coronavirus. There should be a sign posted on every bus about prevention. The virus can be prevented if precautions are taken.

Evan Oraver discussed pedestrian safety in the Tenderloin. The recent fatality highlights the need for urgent action. There needs to be a deeper dive with the affected communities. He would like to meet with the Board members.

Mary Kate Bacalao discussed pedestrian safety, especially for homeless and low-income families. There are many homeless families in heavily trafficked areas near homeless services. Expansion of the crossing guard program could help resolve these issues and help mitigate risks for the families.

Anthony Carrasco agreed with Ms. Bacalao about the need for safety for pedestrians. He discussed a study about having crossing guards for children. The study said that crossing guards are a boon for children and support children in developing healthy and safe pedestrian behaviors for the rest of their lives. There should be investments in their safety.

Arnell Justin discussed the unfairness that Bauer bus drivers are experiencing. As bus drivers, they risk their lives every day but they aren’t covered medically. She risks her life every day on the road but is paid less. They just want what they are owed as drivers. The company only gives excuses for why their medical insurance wasn’t paid.

12. Presentation and discussion regarding transit service. (Explanatory documents include a slide presentation.)

Julie Kirschbaum, Director, Transit, presented the item.

PUBLIC COMMENT:

Herbert Weiner expressed appreciation for the improvements but said there are problems with surface transportation. He mentioned the schedule of the 2 Clement. There needs to be equity in transportation. There is still a “bully culture” in the SFMTA that employees are suffering from. This must be addressed. He would like to see more focus on surface transportation. There’s a lot of room for improvement.

13. Presentation and discussion regarding changes to various rates, fees, charges, and fines in the Fiscal Year 2021 and FY 2022 SFMTA Operating Budget. (Explanatory documents include a staff report, indexing plan, proposed fares, fees, fines, rates and slide presentation.)

Chair Heinicke left the meeting.

Leo Levenson, Director, Finance and Information Technology, presented the item.

PUBLIC COMMENT:

Rebekah Evenson discussed towing practices and fees. She represents people who are suing the SFMTA for unpaid parking tickets. These fees violate due process rights. There are proposals to reduce the fees charged for towing but even with that, there are still situations where people with low incomes are punished. She urged that the practice be discontinued.

Elisa Della-Piana discussed towing fees. The number of people who lose their cars after a tow is 50-60%. That’s a total loss for some people. This is draconian impact but that’s what’s happening. There is a solution, which is to reduce or eliminate tows. It costs a lot and people are losing their homes when their cars are towed.

Tori Larson stated that she works with low-income clients. She hears from people every day who live in their vehicle and have their car towed. Reducing a fee to $100 is reasonable. The SFMTA is adding an administrative step, to have to prove someone is homeless, which is offensive. People who are towed for “poverty tows” is 50%. Tows aren’t the only deterrent that exists. The system isn’t functioning.

Melodie asked the Board to stop towing people who live in their vehicles.

Flo Kelly stated that any fees for towing, including citations, that are slapped on people with low incomes, adds to the instability of their lives. All fees should be waived. She appreciated Director Torres’s comment about whether the cost to administer fare evasion is worth it.

Herbert Weiner wondered if bicycles and scooters on the sidewalk were being cited. Every time he sees a tow truck, he thinks of a noose.

Anne Stuhldreher discussed low income discounts for towing. She expressed support for a reduced towing fee for people who are experiencing homelessness. She shared some examples of how fees impact people. It’s difficult for people to come up with $100 to pay a fine. She asked the SFMTA to make it easy for people to access programs.

Christa Brown asked for a more comprehensive plan to address fare evasion. She’s been hearing about the impact of fare evasion tickets on people who live in poverty. Some can’t afford the monthly rate of $40 as it’s one-third of their entire income. She asked the SFMTA to ensure that everyone has access to public transportation.

Kate Richardson discussed the tow fee reduction program. The process is a problem. Reduced fees are great but the Board should consider the elimination of fines for poverty-related tows. Many people aren’t able to access the programs designed to help them.

Chelsea Crumpler stated that this is a step forward. Fare evasion or towing citations aren’t a deterrent because there isn’t a choice to people who can’t get to work. There’s an ongoing problem with access to resources. There needs to be less red tape and bureaucracy. Think of a way to combine public transit with the free lunch program at schools.

Kelley Cutler stated that towing is a major issue. A vehicle is someone’s home and it’s a huge hit when the vehicle is towed. Eliminating those fees is a great direction but $100 is still a huge obstacle. There are 1,000 people on the shelter waitlist. The City is currently targeting people who live in their vehicles which leads to people losing their home.

Armando Garcia stated that he hears from people who need help with towing issues or tow evasion citations. He’s encouraged that the SFMTA is looking into this and eliminating some of the pressures of people who live in poverty. Many people are confused about how to resolve a ticket. There’s a runaround that isn’t helping people.

Miquesha Willis said that she has lost her cars due to towing or booting. She can’t afford the tickets and has been in a downward spiral. Towing doesn’t help people who are homeless. Let us keep our property. There are many ways to help people.

Paul Briley said there’s not community interest for expanding meter hours. There should be a payment play to help people with low incomes. Fees and tows push people further into poverty.

Ben Linshinger said that it’s a disaster to be targeted when living in a vehicle. He agrees with the idea of making Muni free and making other programs more accessible. Any effort towards financial justice is worth doing.

June Whitehorse stated that there are barriers to getting a low-income certification. Raising fees isn’t a deterrent to people who make a lot of money. There aren’t enough safe parking spots in San Francisco. The SFMTA should focus on finding places to park rather than on increasing fees. There’s a lot of discussion nationally about free transit. The SFMTA should look into that.

Brian Edwards echoed previous concerns. The financial justice program is ameliorating some issues but it’s ridiculously expensive to go that route. Many people who have their car towed will never know about the programs that are available to people with low incomes. There should be no charge and no additional bureaucracy.
