Kid's safety tips for riding the buses and trains

- Make sure you're standing well back from the curb, boarding island or platform when waiting for the bus or train.
- When boarding in the Muni Metro subway, stand behind the yellow bumpy tiles at the edge of the platform. The bumpy tiles mean "caution—you're too close to the edge."
- Watch your step when entering or exiting Muni vehicles, especially in bad weather. Rain can make floors slippery.
- No running, shoving or roughhousing on a Muni boarding island or platform. You or someone else could get hurt.
- When entering or exiting a bus or train, make sure that you hold onto the handrail so that your backpack or book bag doesn't get caught in the door.
- If sitting, remove your backpacks and hold them in front of you. Keep valuable items out of sight and in your backpack.
- If standing, always stand behind the yellow lines just inside the doors. Make sure that you hold on tightly to the seat-mounted handrails or overhead straps. Muni buses and trains move quickly and can stop suddenly.
- Music, video games or computers are fine on Muni vehicles as long as you wear headphones or ear buds.
- When exiting the vehicle, never walk behind the bus or train. And always check for cars and other traffic before stepping off the platform or curb. Make sure, whenever possible, that you cross in the crosswalk or at the street corner.
- If you have to cross in front of the bus and there is no intersection, walk on the sidewalk next to the bus, taking ten giant steps forward before crossing. Make sure that the driver sees you before you step into the street. Don't forget to look both ways!
- If you drop something in front of a bus, don't bend down to get it—the driver may not see you. Get the driver's attention first, then reach down to pick up the item you dropped.
