

Muni Art Featured Artist: John Keating

Inside The Bus

These pictures are a combination of translated poems and observances made in my jaunts around the city. When I apply my pen to the paper I become immersed in the work. My hand flows freely and I try to capture the subject, not through the lens of a camera but through the pen in my hand. Our city provides fantastic material to work with.

Artist Thanks: Thanks to Nancy Bliss and Hilary and the gang at Look Gallery, SF Beautiful and to Yves Nicolas, James Grant, Sue Kubly, Jacquie Harris, my parents and my sisters for their years of support.

from Lost Coast

On a treadmill by the window at 16th and De Haro
I name pigeons, high wires, green car, blue. There must be other names for metal boxes, electrical labyrinths rigged across the sky. Other names for blue. Other than sea.
Not all birds that live in the city are pigeons. Not all are birds.
I strap myself into the rowing machine.
What an exile.
What dry land, wet air, flowers breaking through windows.

Jennifer Elise Foerster

An excerpt from Bright Raft in the Afterweather by Jennifer Elise Foerster.
Copyright © 2018 Jennifer Elise Foerster. Reprinted by permission of the University of Arizona Press.

Stars

At dusk the first stars appear.
Not one eager finger points toward them.
A little later the stars spread with the night
And an orange moon rises
To lead them, like a shepherd, toward dawn.

Gary Soto

"Stars," from The Elements of San Joaquin. Copyright © 2018 Gary Soto.
Used with Permission from the Author and Chronicle Books, LLC., www.ChronicleBooks.com.

from Persian Blue

Tonight, our thousand and second night, tell me the story of our laughter through sudden summer rain.
Tell me the story of salt: on your shoulder, chest, and chin. Tell me how that first week we seemed to know our pasts by heart, where we'd been and where we planned to go.

Derrick Austin

An excerpt from "Persian Blue" by Derrick Austin from Trouble the Water (BOA Editions, 2016).
Reprinted with the permission of the publisher.

Cranes in August

They clutter the house, awkwardly folded, unable to rise. My daughter makes and makes them, having heard the old story: what we create may save us. I string a long line of them over the window. Outside the gray doves bring their one vowel to the air, the same sound
from many throats, repeated.

Kim Addonizio

"Cranes in August" by Kim Addonizio. All rights reserved.
Reprinted with author's permission.

THE NIGHT PIECE

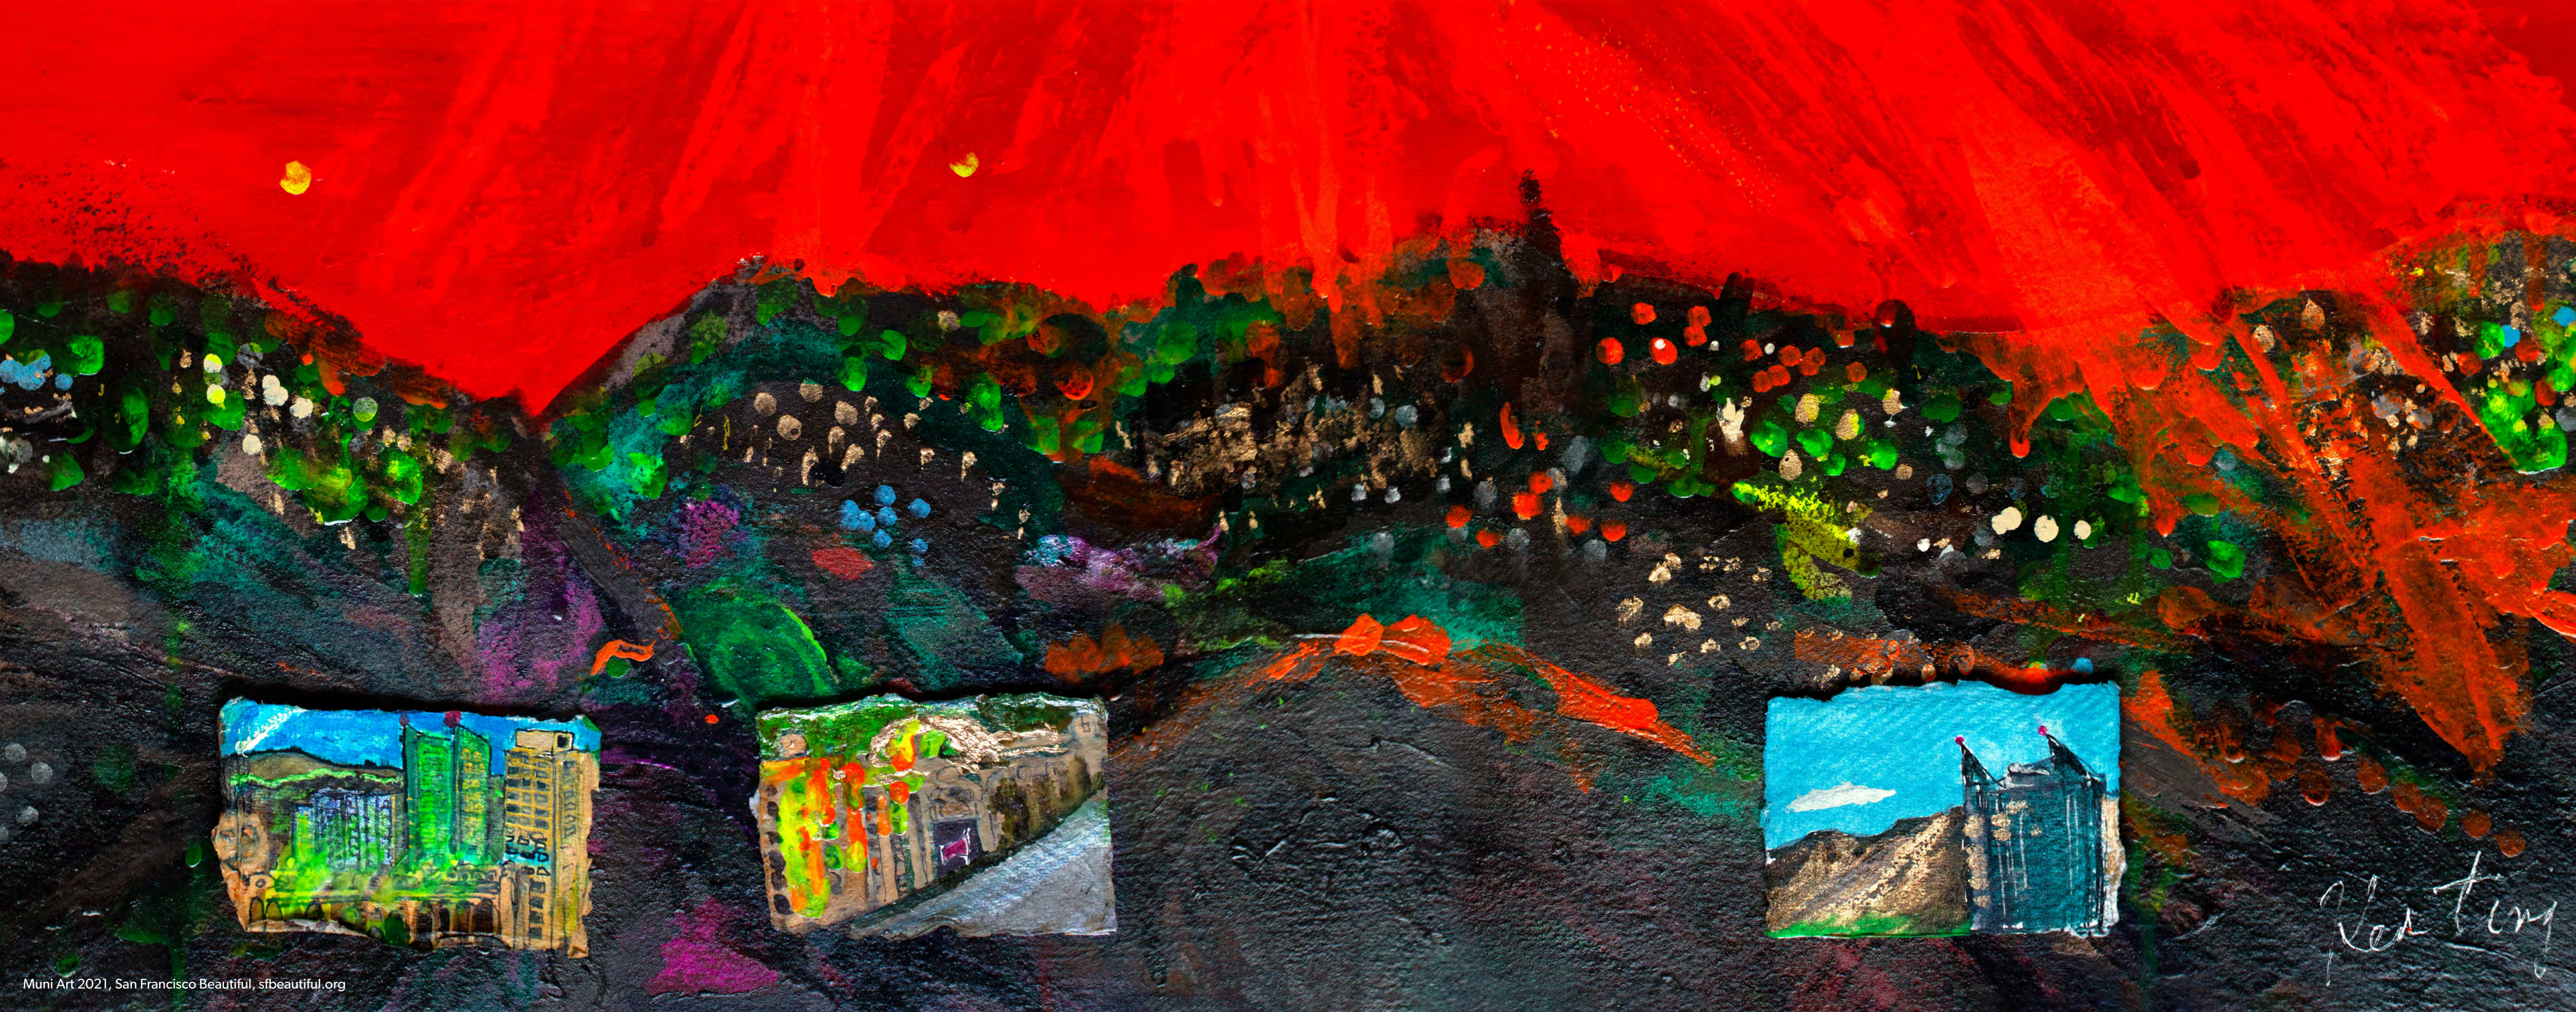

The fog drifts slowly down the hill
And as I mount gets thicker still,
Closes me in, makes me its own
Like bedclothes on the paving stone.

Here are the last few streets to climb,
Galleries, run through veins of time,
Almost familiar, where I creep Toward sleep like fog, through fog like sleep.

Thom Gunn

"The Night Piece" by Thom Gunn, from Collected Poems. Copyright © Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 1994.
Reprinted with the permission of the publisher.

Ker Ling

